About the Emergency Broadband Benefit

The Emergency Broadband Benefit (EBB) Program aims to ensure that internet service is affordable for everyone. It was created by Congress and offered by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) to provide eligible households with discounted internet services during the Covid-19 pandemic.

The EBB discount is temporary, and the FCC will announce the end date six months after the COVID-19 pandemic is declared over or when funding runs out, whichever comes first. Viasat will email customers 30 days before the discount expires, or as soon as possible after the FCC issues notification of the program ending. At the end of the program, you will be charged the undiscounted rate, and you will be subject to Viasat's general terms and conditions if you continue to receive the service.

Whether you are a new customer, you choose to keep your existing service at a discounted rate, or whether you choose to upgrade, you're free to stop your service entirely or switch to another plan at any time without penalty, including when the EBB discount ends. Viasat will stop providing broadband service at the conclusion of the EBB program unless you agree to continue to receive broadband service at the undiscounted rate and with Viasat's standard terms and conditions.

Although Viasat hopes you will choose its services, households may obtain broadband service supported by the EBB program from any participating provider of their choosing, and they may transfer their EBB program benefit to another provider at any time.
